Atlas in Questions

6+

This large format book aims to make children discover the natural wonders of our planet: the great sites, the high mountains, and the extraordinary animal and plant species. The environmental aspect is raised with the problems of greenhouse gases, the deforestation, the pollution, the overexploitation and the threats to fragile environments and species. On the last double-page, children will learn ecological gestures to preserve species and environments.

Atlas of Our Beautiful Planet

In this beautifully illustrated book, children will find in 80 maps the answers to 80 questions about various themes such as geography, nature, space, transport, population, languages:

- What is the longest train in the world?
- What are the areas of the world where no one lives?
- How many planes are flying in the sky at the same time?
- What is the longest land path that exists without crossing the ocean?

So many questions that intrigue and amaze! A book to learn and travel around the planet discovering the world in a different and funny way!

EKO

Benoît Grelaud & Sylvain Even

On another planet, far away from the Earth, live small beings, half-human, half-vegetal, called the Fytos. Eko is one of them, but he is young, fearless, and disobedient, which will cause him a lot of trouble! When he touches the sacred stones, Eko puts all his people in danger. To fix this mistake, he will have to find three new stones, spread in hostile and unexplored regions... To bring back the first one, the ocean stone, Eko will go through a thousand trials and face a thousand dangers. Will the young Fytos reach the end of his quest and save his people?

A quest in three volumes, three books, three stones to return:
The Ocean Stone (volume 1)
